MUSIC USHERS IN AND SPEEDS XMAS

String Instruments and Human Voices Join in Services of Song.

THREE GROUPS CAROL
One Crowd of Carol Singers Gives Persons at County Home and Patients at Hospital Musical Treats.

Christmas was ushered in and then, after a stay, was bid God speed
by music.

Strains of "Silent Night, Peaceful Night," "Come All Ye Faithful,"
"Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and other familiar Christmas melodies were caroled on the streets of town
at midnight Christmas eve.

Stringed instruments and human voices joined in services of song in the early hours on Christmas morning. At 11:40 o'clock, Monday night, a special service was held at St.
Francis Xavier Catholic church, attended by many worshippers.

One crowd of carol singers gave persons at the county home and patients at the Warner Hospital musical treats during the night. In this group of singers were many from St. James Lutheran church choir, augmented by former members of that organization, and others.

In this group were Mr. and Mrs.
Roy E. Zinn, Misses Martha, Grace and Ruth Sachs, Miss Anna Hollebaugh, Miss Carrie Miller, Miss Ethel Cudph, D. C. Stallsmith, Dr. G. E. Miller, George Sachs, Harold Mumper
and C. William Duncan.

These carolers made the trip around town in a motor truck loaned by the John C. Lower Company and driven by B. W. Hummer.

Stringed Carolers Please

A group of young men, members of the Maestri Club, Baltimore street, unlimbered banjos, guitars and other stringed instruments and played the well-known Christmas
anthems at the homes of all members of the club. In this group were Percy Miller, Fred Pfeiffer, Lawrence Sheeds, Sterling Bollinger and Ralph Stoner.

Another group of carolers were members of the Citizens' Band. With horns, cornets and other hand instruments they played the Yuletide hymns about the streets.

At many homes in the vicinity of which the carolers appeared, they were invited in for refreshments which added much to the fun of singing or playing.

In story and song, the familiar Christmas legend was told in special services at most of the Gettysburg churches on Christmas Day.

Special services by the Sunday schools of the various churches were held—some on Christmas morning,
others on Christmas night.

St. James Lutheran Sunday school held its Christmas entertainment on Christmas evening, attended by a large crowd. Exercises by the infant department and a cantata by older members of the Sunday school were on the program.

Strine and cornet clubs were also out celebrating, making a hit with their Christmas numbers.

E. J. Dougherty, Leroy Sheeds, Bernard Stock and Fred Swisher formed a combination of instrumentalists highly appreciated at the places visited.

GIVE GENERAL MANAGER A CHRISTMAS TURKEY

Joseph T. Mahon Is Recipient of Gifts From Rubber Heel Factory Employees.

Male employees of the Sure Foot
Heel and Rubber Company presented Joseph T. Mahon, general manager, with a 20-pound turkey as a Christmas present. The female employees of the plant gave him a pair of gold cuff links.

Mrs. Florence Grindler, a forelady, was presented with a useful gift by each of the women employees.

TO BURY MRS. SCHRODER ON THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen E.
Schroder, wife of W. S. Schroder, who died at her home on Baltimore street Monday afternoon, will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house, conducted by the Rev. W. C. Robinson. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

HOSPITAL REPORT

Mrs. George Bowers, Gettysburg, R.
6; Mrs. Howard McDonnell and infant daughter, of Hanover; Miss Irene Wolf, Gardners, and Mrs. John Poor, of Biglerville, were discharged as patients from the Warner Hospital.

Grey Fox Surrenders to Hounds in Christmas Chase

Bleak December Afternoon Fails to Put Damper on Ardor of Sportsmen at Hunterstown; Live and Clay Bird Shoot Holds Interest of Nimrods.

Cornered in the woods near Mill-hemes' Dam, one grey fox valiantly fought off a pack of baying dogs until forced to surrender to overwhelming numbers in the annual Christmas Day fox chase at Hunterstown on Tuesday afternoon.

Snow squalls during the afternoon
instead of putting a damper on the annual fox chase and shooting match at Hunterstown seemed only to add zest to the various events in which sportsmen from Gettysburg and all sections of the county participated.

The bleak December afternoon with its driving, snow-mingled, northwest winds sent a chill up and down the spinal columns of the most warmly clad men and women who gathered in the field at the east end of Hunter-stown to watch the program run off.

However, the sporting blood of young and old of both sexes was sent tingling through the veins of the gallery and this thrill all the blasts of Old Man Winter could not mitigate.
Men and women braved the spongy ground to get close-up views of the fox and the pack of hounds, while others intently watched the live and clay bird shoots.

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock, Reynard was liberated, after the hounds had been given the scent which was to later spell doom for the animal despite his cunning. Away over the field the fox loped, headed in an easterly direction. Then turning abruptly to the north, the animal thought to leave its pursuers behind by dashing into a woods.

Fox Gets Start
For half an hour the pack of fifteen or more hounds strained at the leash to be after the fox, but it was not until 3 o'clock that the pack of dogs was loosed and with noses to the earth made off in the general direction taken by the pursued.

At the same time the word go was passed to half a dozen riders, who started off in pursuit of the fox and hounds. The riders for the most part stayed on the hard roads around Hunterstown since the soft earth
made riding hazardous.

The fox led the dogs a merry chase which ended all too soon for its chasers. Less than fifteen minutes after the hounds were unleashed, Reynard was cornered in Millhemes' woods. Here he put up a gallant stand, but it was fifteen or more against one and finally, after a noble stand, he capitulated.

Donald Raffensperger, of near Hunterstown, who followed after the chase on foot, arrived on the scene of Reynard's last stand, first. He drove off the dogs and claimed the carcass.
Raffensperger was only one of a number of young men who followed the chase on foot in the hope of getting the fox.

Trap Shoots Attract

While the fox chase was in progress
as well as before and after, trap shooting was indulged in by a number of nimrods, among them Robert Bell and Robert Thompson, of Gettysburg.

The live bird shoot attracted the majority of the scattergun artists.
Most of the pigeons were brought down before they got beyond the circle outside of which the snipers were busy. However, some of the birds flapped their wings upon sharpshooters and snipers as well and got away unscathed.

Those who preferred the clay targets to the live birds had plenty of sport during the afternoon.

HANOVER YOUTH HIT BY MACHINE

Henry Kraber, 22, Is In West Side Sanitarium,
York.

Henry Kraber, 22, of Hanover, is in the West Side Sanitarium, York, with a possible fracture of the skull,
the result of being struck by an automobile near Cross Keys on the Lincoln Highway on Sunday night.

Kraber in company with two other young men from Hanover was enroute to Abbottstown. They stopped along the road to make minor repairs to their machine.

Two of the young men had entered the car, but the machine driven by Augustus Noel, of near New Oxford, hit young Kraber before he was able to get into the machine. Noel's car was being driven westward on the highway.

The accident occurred in a dense fog and Noel claims he was unable to see ahead of his machine for any great distance. Mr. Noel stopped, however, and rushed Kraber to the office of Dr. Jacob Goeken at New Oxford. Dr. Goeken advised that the injured man be taken to the York hospital where he was removed by Channel Sheely, a New Oxford garage-man.

According to word from York today, Kraber's injuries, while exceedingly painful, are not serious and his condition is reported to be fair.

BUCKNELL CANCELS GAME; FLOOR UNSAFE

Efforts Being Made to Have Game Played Here on January 25.

Donald Weiser, manager of the Gettysburg College basketball team, has been notified by the athletic authorities of Bucknell University that it will be necessary to cancel the game with Gettysburg College to be played at Lewisburg on January 25, because the playing floor has been condemned as unsafe.

Efforts are being made to have the game played here on that date, thereby adding another game to the nine already scheduled for the College cage.

STEVENS SALE IS GOOD

At a sale held Saturday by J. H.
Stevens, of Cumberland township, the sum of $1,654 was realized. The best price brought by cows at the sale was $125 for one; two others were sold for $120 and $121 respectively;
three more were sold at $96, $94 and $89. A pair of black mules brought $241.50, and a quantity of machinery commanded good prices.

MRS. ANNA MARY ALTHOFF

Death Follows Stroke Sustained Last Saturday; Was Aged 72 Years.

Mrs. Anna Mary Althoff, widow of Pius Althoff, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Cook, 135 Hanover street, Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the effects of a stroke sustained last Saturday. She was aged 72 years, 8 months and 20 days.

Mrs. Althoff was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Masenheimer, and was born and spent her early life in the vicinity of Westminster, Maryland.

She is survived by two daughters,
Mrs. Cook, with whom she made her home, and Mrs. William F. Weaver, West Middle street; two sons, Charles E. Althoff, of Harrisburg, and Harry
S. Althoff, of Atlantic City, New Jersey; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Zepp, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Harry Riley, of Hudson, Iowa, and two grandchildren, Miss Dorothy A. Weaver, of Gettysburg, and Charles Althoff, Jr., of Harrisburg.

Funeral Thursday morning, meeting at the house at 9:30 o'clock with requiem high mass at St. Francis Xavier Catholic church at 10 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. Father Mark E. Stock. Interment in the Catholic cemetery.

CHURCH PRESENTED PROGRAM ON MONDAY

A delightful program of songs and recitations in commemoration of Christmas Day was given Monday night by the Presbyterian Sunday School. The church was attractively decorated with pine and other Christmas greens. Cradle roll members were presented with toys and the older pupils with oranges and candy.
Previous to the program, Walter Scott Wood, little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wood, and Agnes Carrie Gilbert, baby daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Paul Gilbert, of Cranberry Lake,
New York, were baptized by Rev.
William C. Robinson.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

Announcement has been received here of the engagement of Edgar H.
Bixler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bixler, of Hanover, to Miss Mildred Chance Strong, of Arlington, New Jersey. Miss Strong is attending
Bradford Academy at Bradford Hills, Massachusetts, and at various times
has been a guest of Miss Elizabeth Bixler, Hanover, cousin of the groom-to-be, who is also a student there.
Mr. Bixler was a former student in Gettysburg College, at present being located in Chester where he is employed as a chemist. The wedding date will be announced later.

SANTA PAYS VISIT TO GETTYSBURG

Is Master of Ceremonies
at Christmas Tree
Celebration in Square
Monday Night; Rotary Sponsored Activity.

Santa Claus in full regalia and in all his glory held forth at the municipal Christmas tree celebration in Center Square the night before Christmas. In fact there were two Santa Claus and they made glad the hearts of Gettysburg children between the ages of five and eight years with a treat of candy and oranges.

It was the first municipal Christmas celebration Gettysburg has had in five years and in general interest
it eclipsed any ever held here before,
according to those who witnessed it.

The Rotary Club sponsored the movement this year and its members dispensed with their regular weekly luncheon and gathered around the eight Christmas trees instead to participate in the fun. The program was carried out as planned, with a short address, interspersed with Christmas stories for the children, by the Rev.
Harry Daniels, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church.

At the same time, New Oxford people and country folk round about gathered at a brightly illuminated Christmas tree in the center of the borough and held a celebration all their own.

Christmas Day was again ushered in, after the kiddies had been carefully tucked into bed and Old Saint Nick had begun to get in his best work, by the beautiful singing of a group of Gettysburg Choral singers who for many years have made it an annual custom to usher in the greatest of all holidays to start the rounds of town immediately after the clock strikes twelve on Christmas Eve.

CHRISTMAS BOTH GREEN AND WHITE

Snow Flurries in Afternoon Partly Satisfy Desires For
"White" Holiday.

Residents of Adams county were able to take their choice on Tuesday,
for those who desired a "green"
Christmas as well as those wanting a "white" Christmas were granted their desires.

Although cloudy Christmas morning, no precipitation was experienced until about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when light flurries of snow and rain
mixed began to fall, and continued until well into the evening.

The weather was too warm, however, to allow the white flakes to remain long, and in spite of a slight fall of snow during the colder hours of the night all traces soon disappeared
under a bright sun this morning.

TO KEEP HIGHWAYS FREE OF SNOW DURING WINTER

Snow removal crews of the State Highway department this winter will be at work whenever required on 2,700 miles of state highways—or 800 miles more than during the winter of 1922-23.

In addition to the work of keeping the Lincoln Highway open from its eastern end at Morrisville, through Gettysburg and west to the State line, the following roads in the immediate vicinity will also be kept clear of drifts:

From Gettysburg to the Maryland line on the Emmitsburg "pike" from this place to the Maryland line on the Littlestown-Westminster road
and from Harrisburg to Gettysburg.

REINECKER-PETERS

Charles D. Reinecker, of York
Springs, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Reinecker, and Eliza F. Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Peters, of Aspers, were married at the home of the bride on Saturday, December 22.
The ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. I. Kauffman.

Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held at the bride's home, which was attended by a number of relatives. Those present were:
Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. George Reinecker, Mrs. Frances
Gable, Mr. and Mrs. C. Clayton Bream,
Mr. and Mrs. Zeal Peters, Pauline
Reinecker, Hazel Peters, Irene Bream,
Robert Bream, Wilmore Bream, Bowers
Peters and Rodney Peters.

Murder and Near Lynching Mark Xmas in the Mountains

Young Leader of Washington County Gang is Shot Trying to Aid Wife of Assailant Following Son's Call.

Residents here do not have to go to Kentucky to find mountaineers of the present day who make and enforce their own laws, it is stated upon the receipt here of reports of a killing and threatened lynching in a neighboring county, Washington county, Maryland.

According to word just received from Hagerstown, Chester Smith, 26,
a mountaineer, whose word was law
in the Sandy Hook district, is dead.
The man held as his slayer, Millard Goodhart, tender of No. 2 lock on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, near Sandy Hook, probably owes his life to the timely arrival of Sheriff Richard Duffey and his deputies from Hagerstown, for a crowd of Smith's friends was about to storm Goodhart's house and lynch him when the officers checked the mob. The lock-tender then was rushed to the jail in Hagerstown.

What Led To The Shooting

According to the story told at the coroner's inquest Tuesday by Gordon Goodhart, 20, son of the accused man, his father and mother had quarreled earlier in the day. A remark the wife made to the lock-tender angered him and he attacked her with a wrench, the son said. Goodhart inflicted an ugly wound on the head.
Remonstrating with his father, the son testified, he was threatened and warned
"to stay out of it."

While the fight between Goodhart
and his wife was in progress the son slipped from the house, ran to Sandy Hook and pleaded with Smith to return with him and intervene in behalf of his mother. Smith, accompanied by a friend and the Goodhart boy,

went to the Goodhart home and warned the locktender that "his gang would take care of him" if Mrs. Goodhart was attacked again. Goodhart apparently heeded the warning. But not long after Smith had gone, the son told, his father again struck his mother. Again the son brought Smith back. The father, learning that Smith was returning, barricaded the door. Smith is said to have forced the door, but the coroner could find no evidence of this.

Smith Shot And Killed

Words passed between Goodhart and Smith. Then a full charge from a shotgun entered Smith's abdomen.
He died several hours later.

Sandy Hook is a village in the southernmost neck of Washington county. It is the center of a wild mountain community, where the people are said to make their own laws and abide by them. Smith was the recognized leader of the younger generation.

When his gang of young mountaineers learned that their leader had been killed they swarmed out of the hills,
taking several ropes.

Plan To Get Goodhart

They were planning a ruse to capture Goodhart without shooting when Sheriff Duffey and his deputies arrived. The Sheriff warned the gang he would not see Goodhart harmed.

Goodhart says he shot in self-defense and until Smith had broken in the door of his home.

The inquest jury, of which Magistrate S. A. Keller, of Sandy Hook, acted as coroner, found that Smith met his death at the hands of Goodhart.

WILLIAM F. SADLER

Resident of County and Civil War
Veteran Dies at Son's Home.

William F. Sadler died at 3:45 o'clock this morning at the home of his son, Clinton E. Sadler, in Butler township, following cerebral hemorrhages. He was aged 81 years and 5 months.

Mr. Sadler was a Civil War veteran, having served for three years in the 138th regiment of the Pennsylvania volunteers. He was discharged at Pittsburgh, and was a member of the Veterans' Reserve Corps.

Besides his son, Clinton, Mr. Sadler is survived by the following: three daughters, Mrs. E. I. W. Guise, Aspers; Mrs. W. E. Eichelberger, Tyrone township; and Mrs. Frank S.
Troste, Latimore township; eight grandchildren; a brother, John Sadler, of Dillsburg; two sisters, Mrs.
Charles Seapane, York, and Mrs.
David Rush, of the western part of the State.

Funeral services at the home of his son on Friday at 1 o'clock, with interment in the cemetery at Bendersville.

HAINES DISSOLVES

CIGAR PARTNERSHIP

H. L. Haines, Sr., father of "Hinky" Haines, New York Yankee
outfielder who was Gettysburg College's backfield coach in 1921, has dissolved partnership in his cigar factory at Red Lion, York county, with Stephen S. Sechrist. The dissolution, made by mutual consent, will take place January 1.

Mr. Haines will continue to operate his Stry factory which is being enlarged at the present time. "Hinky," between the end of the professional football season and the time to go south with the Yankees, spends his days learning the business of his father.

DIXMUDE'S FATE

REMAINS UNCERTAIN

(By Associated Press.)
Paris, Dec. 26—Officials at the Ministry of Marine said today that, although they had received many messages reporting the presence of the missing dirigible Dixmude over various parts of Tunis and the sea coast, they considered that the last trustworthy news was the official dispatch last Friday announcing her arrival over Tunis. It was at this place that the Dixmude was instructed by wireless to remain in the strait because of a violent storm
along the coast.

The message in question was sent at 11 P. M. Friday at which hour the dirigible was about 125 miles south of the Mediterranean coast. The Dixmude was then proceeding southward.

VETOES USE OF NAVY VESSELS

Mellon Says Impracticable to Use
Them in Halting Rum Flow.

IS REPLY TO LETTER

Request Was Made That Navy Vessels
be Used to Reinforce Coast Guard
in Liquor Blockade.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Dec. 26.—Reinforcement of the coast guard rum blockade with shipping board craft, navy destroyers, eagle boats or submarine chasers would be impracticable and uneconomical, says Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in a letter received today by M. H. Crist, managing editor of the Brooklyn Eagle.

The government contemplates sending the coast guard, Mr. Mellon says,
"not only for work in connection with the preventing of smuggling, but also for relief and rescue work at sea." He expresses a belief, however, that new and specially designed craft must be built for that purpose.

Mr. Mellon's letter was in reply to a suggestion he received from Mr.
Crist that the vessels of the navy or the shipping board, but not now in use, might be turned over to the coast guard for use in stemming the illegal flow of liquor from the sea.

The Treasury department and the commandant of the coast guard have studied the practicability from technical and economic standpoints of transferring certain classes of naval vessels to the coast patrol service,
Mr. Mellon says.

CLOSED SEASON ON GROUSE NEXT

Sportsmen Here Anticipate Protective Measure For Game,
Now Scarce.

Inquiries made at the office of Secretary Seth E. Gordon, of the State Game Commission, indicate a strong movement to bring about a new closed season on grouse is under way in the State and will likely be much heard of in the next few months, it is declared. Reports received are that grouse are again being thinned out and that the kill this year depleted the number to what some hunters insist is an alarming degree. It is expected petitions will be circulated in most of the counties asking the Game Commission to declare a closed season by counties for a year or two on grouse.

The last closed season on grouse was arranged several years ago and resulted in quite an increase in the birds, the Commission spending considerable money to help in the propagation. For a year or two there was fine grouse shooting, but hunters have increased faster than the birds and in some counties they are pretty well gone.

Investigations are being made by Game protectors into reports of killing of does in the Franklin county districts where a special deer season was arranged for last week to thin out the deer. This was the first special season under the Act of 1923 and 100 hunters were licensed. The season ended last Friday night under the special license and there was a big kill, according to preliminary reports.

WILL TRAIN HIS JAWS BY CHEWING MUCH GUM

Philadelphia, Dec. 26.—Admitting the theft of a gum slot machine, Samuel Curtis, negro, was today sentenced by Judge McDevitt to remain in the sheriff's cell room and chew
up the contents of the machine.

"But, Judge, I don't like chewing gum," protested the prisoner. The judge, however, ordered Curtis confined until the entire stock had been masticated.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Dec. 26.—Resumption of business after the Christmas holidays was attended by higher prices at the opening of today's stock market.
New high records were established during the morning by a dozen issues. Trading in rails was somewhat irregular and quiet. Cull money opened at 4 1/2 percent.

NEGRO ROBS BUTCHER

(By Associated Press.)

Philadelphia, Dec. 26.—An unmasked bandit today held up a butcher in his shop, robbed him of $1,200 and locked him in his own ice
box. A customer coming in a few minutes later released the butcher.

First Lieutenant L. A. Day, of Denver, Colorado, is passing the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Faber.

H. Edward Barbeland, of Philadelphia, spent several days recently with friends and relatives here.

DENBY APPROVES ARCTIC FLIGHT

Secretary Discusses Possible New Continent And Trip's Value.

NOT "MERE DASH TO POLE"

Exploration, Investigation And Air Routes Warrant Work, He Says; May Discover New Lands.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Secretary Denby for the first time Tuesday discussed details of the exploration of the North Polar region which the Navy Department will undertake next spring and summer. In doing so he made public an approval report of the board in charge of the plans which calls for two vessels, six planes and a dirigible to participate in the expedition into the unknown corner of the earth.

The value of the expedition, Secretary Denby said, may be outlined under three main divisions—exploration, scientific investigation and pioneer work for commercial air routes.

Huge Unexplored Territory
"Over 1,000,000 square miles of territory between Alaska and the North Pole has never been explored by man," he said. "The belief that land may be found in this great area is strongly supported by reports that have been made from time to time by Arctic travelers. In fact, the probable existence of land is indicated on the maps of our Hydrographic Office, though the existence of such land is still in dispute. Keenan Land and Crocker Land are so indicated on the edge of this vast unexplored territory, and a question mark appears after the name of each, indicating that their existence has not been definitely established."

"There has also been observed in the Arctic Ocean a variance of the time of tides from what would normally be expected. This variance amounts to as much as three hours difference in the time of high and low water, and is said to be explained only through the existence of an Arctic continent, which has never been discovered, owing to the fact that the area in which it might be located has never been traversed."

"Then, too, a study of the known map of the Arctic, wherein are located Spitzbergen, Nova Zembla, Wrangel Island and New Siberia, gives added weight to the probability that the same volcanic influences which brought these islands into existence has also raised other lands yet to be discovered above the surface of the Arctic Ocean."

Importance of Work
"Let us question the value of discoveries of this nature, it is well to remember that the purchase of Alaska was bitterly attacked at the time of its acquisition as 'Seward's folly.' Spitzbergen was considered worthless until valuable coal deposits were located there and we are at the present time aware of the international interest that has been evidenced in Wrangel Island."

"This aside from the importance that has attached to the accurate charting of the northern limits of the North American continent. New theories of oceanography have resulted from the discovery that Greenland was an island and not a continent, and the work of explorers has established the fact of the so-called polar drift from west to east over the polar sea, accounting for the existence of icebergs in the Northern Atlantic."

Commercial Air Routes
"Commercial air routes over the Arctic are practicable today if we would take the word of explorers and men who have spent a great part of their lives in the Arctic," Secretary Denby continued. "As regards distances, certainly the Arctic routes for air travel represent a great saving over any other possible lanes of travel between the lands in the Northern Hemisphere."

WILL RETRY KLUXEN
Was Acquitted of Murder of School Girl Last July.
(By Associated Press.)
Morristown, N. J., Dec. 26.—Efforts are being made to retry Francis Kluxen, 16 year old boy, who a year ago last July was acquitted of the murder of Janet Lawrence, a school girl. The county prosecutor has filed with the county clerk an application for records of the trial as a preliminary step. The prosecutor said today that the jury had been summoned from the wrong county and therefore Kluxen would not be in jeopardy twice for the same offense, in the legal sense, if he should be tried again.

After his acquittal Kluxen was taken under the patronage of Monell Sayre, wealthy Madison bachelor, who last Friday filed papers for his adoption. On Sunday, Mr. Sayre said that the rector and vestrymen of Grace Episcopal church had closed the church to the boy because of his past. This was later denied.

SLAYER'S BODY IS BURNED IN HOME

Man Who Killed Three Women Exhumed And Destroyed.

Jefferson, Maine, Dec. 26.—The body of John Snow was exhumed early Tuesday from the grave where it was buried Monday and placed in the cottage where he killed his wife and two other women on Saturday. The house was then set on fire. The charred body was found in the ruins later in the day.

County Attorney Weston M. Hilton has begun an investigation in an effort to determine who was responsible.

The countryside was stirred when it was learned that Snow, after killing the wife and son of Deputy Sheriff Frank C. Jewett at their home in Whitefield, had come to Jefferson, where his wife, her aunt and her grandmother lived, and had shot the three women, then ended his own life.

Threats To Burn Body Made
Although the medical examiner characterized the murders as "the work of a madman," threats that Snow's body would be burned were said to have been made the next day.

Funeral services were held Monday for the three women and the burial was in a cemetery in Jefferson. Authorities refused permission for the burial of Snow's body in the cemetery, and it was interred with out ceremony in a grave on the farm where his wife had lived.

Delay In Reporting Burning
County authorities were not notified of the exhumation and burning until several hours after the cottage had been destroyed.

Funerals for Mrs. Jewett and her son will be held some time this week. It is the theory of the authorities that Snow, who had been separated from his wife and placed under bonds to keep the peace because of complaint that he had beaten her, killed her and her relatives because she refused to return to him, and that he killed the deputy's wife and son because the deputy refused to let him take the deputy's automobile to come here.

VENIZELOS TO GO TO GREECE SOON

Agrees Temporarily To Return As Guide And Adviser.

Athens, Dec. 26.—Former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, in compliance with the request of the Greek people as voiced by the leaders of the various political parties, will return to Athens immediately.

In informing the Government of his decision, Venizelos, however, clearly points out that his return will be only temporary, for the purpose of acting as a guide and adviser in regulating the situation, and that under no circumstances will he undertake the formation of a Cabinet.

He will take ship at Marseilles December 29, according to his present plans, and he vows that there shall be no public reception.

To Keep Out of Politics
The former Premier explains that his decision to yield to the appeal for his return to Greece was taken after mature reflection and that his only reason for coming for the time being is to help settle the complicated affairs of the nation.

He maintains his previous resolve to keep out of the political arena entirely.

The news that the former Premier had decided to return and would probably arrive here some time next week was made known to the Athenians through the late editions of the afternoon newspapers.

Stirs Mixed Feelings
It gave rise to expressions of the highest satisfaction in revolutionary and Liberal party circles, but caused some apprehension in the Republican camp for the reason that the ex-Premier's plans are unknown. One prominent Republican declared the information supplied to M. Venizelos by his partisans was misleading because it showed the Liberals to be stronger than the Republicans.

M. Venizelos' ban against popular demonstrations upon his arrival caused keen disappointment among his followers, who had planned to outdo in magnitude the welcome accorded the late King Constantine upon his return to Greece after his exile in Switzerland.

FRENCH BELIEVE AIRSHIP IS LOST

Navy Department At Paris Says News Increases Uncertainty.

WARSHIP FLEET IS READY

Dixmude's Former Commander, Now in U. S., Thinks Craft Is Doomed; Sees Chance For Passengers.

Paris, Dec. 26.—Hope that the French dirigible Dixmude, last reported floating out of control over the Tunisian coast, will be saved apparently is waning. This is the tenor of a communique issued by the Navy Department at 7 o'clock Tuesday night.

The communique begins: "News received this afternoon tends to increase the uncertainty of the Dixmude's position."

Earlier Report Doubtful
Then the communique says that investigation has shown it to be doubtful if the lights reported to have been seen between 6 and 7 o'clock Sunday night could have been from the Dixmude. It is pointed out that the reports did not say the body of the dirigible had been seen.

Investigation also has shown that the reports from Bizerte and Sfax, on the Tunisian coast, Sunday afternoon that the Dixmude was going out to sea, evidently in a damaged condition, were incorrect, the statement says.

Fleet Ready To Rush To Aid
Toulon, France, Dec. 26.—Every torpedo-boat destroyer in the harbor is being kept under steam in readiness for a dash to sea in case word is received of the definite location of the missing dirigible Dixmude.

Captain Heinen Thinks
Dixmude May Be Lost
Lakewood, N. J., Dec. 26.—The French dirigible Dixmude, which has been in the air over North Africa since last Tuesday, apparently helpless from motor trouble, has slight chance of being saved, in the opinion of Anton Heinen, consulting engineer on the "Benandosh and German commander of the Dixmude on its first flight in Germany, where it was built to bomb New York."

Chance For Passengers
Captain Heinen said Tuesday he felt no anxiety for the 50 persons aboard. They could leave by ropes if the ship could be lowered near enough to the earth, he said. In that case he thought the ship probably would be lost, unless it was lowered where enough persons could be gathered immediately to hold it down. The chief danger, he said, was that a storm might carry the ship to sea.

Captain Heinen said reported movements of the dirigible indicated that he commanding officer believed he could repair the motors in the air and eventually return to the home station under his own power.

W. M. WORKER HIT AT ROAD CROSSING
Frank H. Chairs, Western Maryland Railroad worker of Hagerstown, is dead and James G. Spahn, of 609 West North avenue, Baltimore, is in the Hagerstown hospital in a serious condition, as a result of a crash at the Norfolk and Western Railroad grade crossing on the Williamsport pike on the outskirts of Hagerstown late Monday night.

Chairs was killed instantly. Spahn, a chauffeur of Baltimore, happened to overhear a conversation between Chairs and a friend. Chairs was awaiting a trolley to take him to Williamsport, where he was to procure additional decorations for his Christmas tree.

Spahn offered to take him over in his machine. Chairs and Spahn were on their way back to the former's home in this city, when the car was struck by a freight.

Spahn said he was not accustomed to the watchman's signal and, when he did not observe any safety gates, he believed that the track was clear. The rear car of the freight, which was being shifted backward, struck the car and dragged it several hundred feet. Spahn will recover.

HOW LONG WILL THIS ONE LAST?

Diamonds of Malopo

by

VICTOR ROUSSEAU

COPYRIGHT BY W.G. CHAPMAN

Van Vorst saw Winton and, standing beside his horse, aimed deliberately and fired. The bullet whizzed Winton's cheek. Next moment Winton was grappling with the thief. Van Vorst raised the revolver and brought it, butt downward, smashing across Winton's head.

Winton dropped, but staggered to his feet in time to see Van Vorst leap into the saddle and ride away like the wind toward the desert. Then Sam's shout was heard. The negro appeared again, leading a horse by the halter, the saddle and bridle across his arm.

He had remembered that Kash kept a horse in his stable, a racer which he had acquired cheaply as the result of a bet, and owing to an injury to the animal's fetlock. It was one of the best horses in Malopo, and the sight of it between the shafts of Kash's cart had created a good deal of feeling against the Armenian.

Sam began to slip on the bridge hastily, while Winton, snatching the saddle from him, adjusted it and began to pull in the girth.

"I'll catch him!" said Sam. Winton would at any other time have been astonished at the transformation in the man. The negro who had run yelling from the Chronicle office on the day before now seemed devoid of fear.

"No more, if you have any play!" she pleaded.

"You get help for Ned Burns," said Winton, and mounted.

The horse needed no urging. It had been kept for days together in Kash's stable, its only exercise the pulling of the storekeeper's cart on the slow rounds of Malopo. The sense of a rider brought back the memories of the old days. It dashed off in pursuit of Van Vorst as if Winton's mind communicated to its own the urgency of capture.

Winton stuck to his seat doggedly and tried to keep his senses. The blow had reopened his old wound, and the blood was pouring into his eyes in a blinding torrent. But he concentrated all his will upon the chase. Unless he could regain the diamond syndicate would cast him from his control of the was empty. With a curse he spurred his horse and galloped away.

Winton disengaged himself from his dead mount and staggered to his feet. He saw Van Vorst disappearing into the illimitable distance. All round him was the desert. He sat down wearily; when he was stronger he would have to pick his way back to Malopo by his horse's tracks.

He must have dozed for a few minutes, for when he looked up again he saw two riders cantering toward him across the desert.

CHAPTER IX.

Shella's Secret.

As they came nearer he saw that one of them was a woman. He watched the pair with apathy; he felt too ill to be interested in anything very much.

But in a moment he was upon his feet, staring incredulously at the girl. The blaze of moonlight upon her face revealed to him—Shella!

The other man was a Hottentot. At first he thought it was Bottlejohn. Then he perceived it was a shorter, younger man. He was evidently Shella's escort.

But it was Shella's appearance even more than her presence there that astonished Winton. She wore a ragged suit of khaki, with tall boots that reached to the edge of her knickerbockers, in her hair was a wreath of the pungent yellow flowers of the arid lands, her bare throat was encircled by a necklace of blue beads, and there were bracelets of hammered copper upon her wrists.

She leaped from her horse and ran to Winton. "Did he hurt you?" she cried.

Then, seeing the blood upon his face, she uttered an exclamation of fear and began to wipe it with a handkerchief that she drew from her pocket.

"You are wounded!"

"A slight hit on the head—like that other," said Winton. "I'm all right, I think, Shella."

"I'll tell you how I came here. I heard of the conspiracy. It was planned by De Witt. He meant to get the diamond so that you should not sell it and raise money. You would have to go to the syndicate."

"Well, Van Vorst has it all right," answered Winton.

He was still looking in wonder at the girl. Her whole demeanor had changed. She seemed freer, more confident, bolder, braver.

"I'll tell you how I came here," the girl repeated. "I learned of the scheme. Judge Davis hatched it through De Witt. They employed Van Vorst, promising him the diamond. Van Vorst wanted to get downcountry. He agreed. My father knew. They wished him to have a hand in it, but he was afraid. Oh, don't think it was loyalty to you!" she cried.

"I warned you from the beginning," the girl went on. "You should have left us alone. It was not for me to tell you that in his fear of De Witt my father would do anything, betray any trust rather than risk his life. That man has bound us, and some day he will meet his deserts. But when I heard of the plan I rode in to warn you. And I have met you. That's all!"

"No, Shella," said Winton, looking at her and feeling the old mad infatuation for her again, mingled with the old doubts and uncertainties. "There is one thing you have not told me: how you came here, or from where you have come."

"If I tell you, I must tell you what I do not want to tell you," she answered quietly. "I have asked you, in memory of the honor you did me in the coach at Tsapung to leave me, and to let me keep the truth from you. Isn't that enough?"

"It would be enough if I did not believe that you are the victim of a hallucination, Shella," Winton answered.

"Then you shall know," cried the girl. "In any event, you cannot ride back to Malopo tonight, wounded as you are. It is eight miles away, and it is only five to my—my home." There was a bitterness in her voice as she spoke. "If you can ride, and will ride with me tonight, you shall know everything that you want to know before we part for the last time."

"I can ride," answered Winton. "And I wish to know, to prove to you that what seems so dreadful to you is a trifle, something that we can laugh at, Shella."

The girl's attitude was expressive of intense excitement as she listened. She made no reply, but, turning to the Hottentot, addressed him in his own tongue. The man clicked in answer, dismounted from his horse, led it to Winton, and, placing the reins in his hands, set off at an even jog across the desert in the direction from which they had come.

Winton would have helped Shella into the saddle, but she vaulted in without touching the stirrup, and sat upright on her mount, waiting for him. He clambered up, and they set off side by side.

The fresh breeze, blowing on Winton's face, drove the last traces of the chloroform away. The scalp wound had ceased to bleed. Winton began to feel stronger. And he watched Shella, riding gracefully at his side. He perceived that her saddle was of the thinnest and most pliable leather, her feet hardly touched the stirrups; she rode like one of the centauresque figures upon the Elgin marbles. Who and what was she? He could not believe that this girl was the child of the old thief and drunkard who had betrayed him.

But the sense of riding beside her across the free desert transported him to the seventh heaven of happiness. The Hottentot had disappeared; they were alone; he believed that within an hour he would have solved the mystery and proved it nothing.

Yet even then he was vaguely conscious that something in his brain checked the impulses of his heart, warning him, counseling prudence, questioning even his love.

The girl said nothing, and Winton did not break the silence. The miles were reeled off behind them; Winton did not know how long they traveled, but it was not yet dawn when the desert began to give place to a range of broken hills. They ascended a gentle slope between two boulder-strewn elevations. Now the character of the country had changed. Imperceptibly the desert fell away. There was green grass underfoot, an occasional cactus raised its spiny joints among the rocks, here and there were clusters of acacias.

A man baboon barked at them from among the rocks, in challenge of their invasion of his domain, hurled a stone at them, and fled scrambling into his cave. Though no life was in evidence, there was that indefinite stirring around them that betokens the preparations for day. A breeze came up; then a line of amber appeared under the cloud banks in the east.

Dawn was at hand as they rode into the broken hills. Their horses climbed steep slopes, dislodging showers of stones, then began to descend into a fertile valley.

In the distance Winton could see a cluster of beehive huts, the headquarters of the native tribe. And still neither he nor Shella had spoken.

The Hottentot who had set off afoot had arrived before them. He appeared out of a cleft in the mountains and indicated to Winton that he was to dismount. Winton and Shella ascended a little slope afoot, toward the village.

In the center was a clearing, already occupied by a number of natives. They were naked, except for their loin cloths, and carried long throwing spears and white ox-hide shields. As the two approached the chattering ceased.

Winton perceived in the middle of them a very old woman, wearing the waist cloth and a gaudily-colored blanket over her shoulder.

The natives sprang to their feet as Shella drew near and uttered a deep-voiced salutation. She spoke a few words, and silently they filed away into the huts. The old woman, Winton, and Shella were alone in front of a smoldering fire.

The aged woman raised her eyes and fixed them on Winton's face. Winton looked at her intently. She was not unprepossessing, and he could see now that, like most of her race, she had aged more quickly than the years of a white woman would have warranted. Perhaps she was about sixty.

Her skin was the color of a dark European's, sunburned rather than pigmented, and the features were regular; the eyes lacked the semiblooming setting of the Hottentots. It was clear that she had a considerable, perhaps a preponderating proportion of Caucasian blood.

Shella turned to Winton, and, in spite of his minimizing of her promised revelation he felt a chill at his heart at the sight of her face.

"This is my mother," she said, and, bending, kissed the old woman.

Winton stood perfectly still. The revelation had stunned him. As in a dream he looked into the old creature's wrinkled face, conscious of Shella's eyes fixed on his own. A bird broke into song; the tops of the mountains were silhouetted against the red of the sky; nothing seemed to stir, and the bird went on singing.

Shella beckoned to Winton, and he followed her to the summit of the elevation. They were quite alone, looking down on the ring of native huts and the doll-like figure of the old queen of the tribe, who had not stirred. Evidently she had not understood what Shella had said.

Shella faced Winton calmly. "It is your doing," she said quietly. "I wanted you to leave me. Yes, I am the daughter of a white man and a half-breed native woman."

"After my father ran away from dedication, finding comfort in the lice, he made his way into these territories. So much De Witt told you. He wanted to tell you the rest. Perhaps it would have been better if he had done so, but I could not have borne it then. I had been honored by you, as by none of the men in Malopo who know who I am. A native woman, one with the least speck of black blood in her, is always a native in their eyes. Is it not so in your own land?"

"Yes," answered Winton.

"My father became a native chief, as many white men have done in South Africa. Unlike them, he married only one wife. That woman became my mother. I was brought up in her kraal. My earliest recollections are of the tribesmen going out to war. I have seen captives slaughtered, and warriors stabbed through the body with spears, and barbarous, bloody sacrifices. That was in the days when the interior of Bechuanaland was an unknown land. Do you wonder that I could never feel at home among white people, though three-fourths of my blood is white?"

"My father became chief of this tribe. The natives would not let him lead them in battle. They set too high a value on his counsel. And he governed them wisely. There is no man from one end of the country to the other who does not know 'King' Seaton.

"When I was six years old my father thought that the danger of pursuit was over. He planned to take me away, so that I might be brought up among his people. He thought I would forget my birth. He thought that he would give me what he considered to be my rightful heritage. He stole away by night, abandoning my mother. The tribe would not have let him go."

"But he found that it was not easy to sink his identity. He changed his name, but in vain. Wherever he went natives recognized him and told their masters. He had to flee constantly. Mr. De Witt knew his secret. He wanted to make use of him in some dishonest work for which only my father could help him. My father yielded to his threats, and thereafter De Witt hounded him."

"At last my father went back to his tribe, to find that my mother had succeeded to the leadership. He was, already an outcast among the whites; now he became an outcast among the blacks also. The tribe respected him, but they feared him; they thought he was a government agent; they never trusted him. He had become the loneliest man in the whole world."

"And as for me, the memory of those early years was stamped indelibly upon my mind. I looked at men and things from the native's point of view. I, too, was known as one of native blood. People pitied me, derided me, but none held out a helping hand, and never, until you honored me in the coach had any man recognized that I might have the instincts of the white woman—some of them. Perhaps, if you had known you would have felt the same as they did."

"No, Shella," answered Winton. "I wanted you not to know. Has it ever occurred to you that a simple word from a stranger may change the entire course of our lives? You helped me when I had come to despair. Your kindness meant more to me than you can possibly recognize. For I will speak plainly to you now that at last you understand the fatality of your course."

"When Mr. De Witt became infatuated with me I knew that he had a wife downcountry whom he had abandoned. And he knew that I knew it. He did not deceive me. It had never entered his mind that I could expect him to marry a woman with native blood. He had sworn to me that if I went away with him his persecution of my father should stop. There was nothing in his conduct toward me that might not have been done by any man in Malopo. No blame would have attached itself to him in Malopo's eyes."

"I told him that I was willing to sacrifice myself for my father's sake. Why not? I am a native woman; why should I obey the law of the whites when I am a thing shunned and despised?"

"Shella!" cried Winton hoarsely. "Yes, despised," she repeated, flinging out the words defiantly. "As you despise me now."

"You are wrong, Shella. You have suffered, not through people's contempt, but because the world is the same."

TO GROW XMAS TREES AT HOME

Use Is Suggested For Idle Lands; Good Sites Nearby.

A Pennsylvania-grown Christmas tree in each Pennsylvania home will be the order of holiday observance before many years, according to a prediction in a bulletin of the State Department of Forests and Waters made public Christmas Day.

It was not so long ago that most of the Christmas trees used in Pennsylvania came from our native hills, the bulletin points out, but with the devastation of forests, destruction by forest fires and increase in population, home-grown Christmas trees have become very scarce.

This year more than 1,500,000 evergreens are being used for decoration, according to the department's figures, and, of them, three-fifths have been imported from Canada and New England.

This year for the first time, Christmas trees have been imported into Pennsylvania from the Pacific Northwest. One carload of Douglas fir and other evergreens was received for holiday decorations. The trees came from Oregon, and the freight on the single carload was $700.

Because of the falling supply of trees in the New England section, and the quarantine which has been placed upon trees from that section because of the gypsy moth, imported trees will have to come from greater and greater distances, at correspondingly higher freight rates, the department points out. Canada this year furnished a large number, and the department cites figures of one Allentown dealer, who paid $800 for one carload of trees, including $150 freight and $35 duty. The average cost of imported trees this year, the department points out, is $600 a car, with freight charges of $175 a car. The trees usually sell at prices ranging from 10 to 15 cents for each year of growth.

Because of the high freight charges, Pennsylvania will grow its own trees to get good trees at lower prices, the department predicts. Idle acres can be used to good profit by planting Christmas trees and using them for winter decorations.

Home-Grown Trees
The growing of Christmas trees was established in Pennsylvania some years ago, and the State growers now realize an annual return of about $5,000,000 on the trees they sell each year. During the spring of 1923, 500,000 spruce and fir trees were planted in Pennsylvania for the purpose of producing future Christmas trees. Besides those planted by individuals, some were planted by municipalities, vocational schools and Boy Scouts. The residents of Pennsylvania are learning that Christmas trees can be successfully grown on idle land throughout the State. In eight years evergreens can be raised to a suitable growth for Christmas use. Christmas tree growing undoubtedly will be a money-making business for persons who start now, the bulletin adds. There is said to be much land suitable for this purpose in the mountains of Adams county.

As long as fifteen years ago, several landowners in the northeastern section of the State began planting evergreens for this purpose, and for some years have been cutting a crop of trees which sell at $1 and $1.50 each. Selective cutting has been the secret of their success. Besides the larger trees, they have also specialized in smaller potted trees, about five years old, which are sold to people, who keep them indoors during the fall and winter, and plant them in the open in the spring and summer.

FINE SPIRIT DISPLAYED

Christmas is over and it was a Christmas that will not soon be forgotten.

From all reports, it was the best Christmas Gettysburg has ever had in every respect. The real Christmas spirit, the feeling of love and unselfishness, was more evident than ever before at this season of the year.

Those in charge of the Community Celebration deserve a lot of credit for the effective manner in which it was carried out. The choristers were out in greater numbers than ever before on Christmas Eve. No one suffered for lack of a bounteous dinner on Christmas as a result of the foresight and care with which the community was combed by agents of charitable organizations and individuals.

All of which is a strong argument against the often-heard statement that we are becoming selfish and self-centered as a people and are heading toward the proverbial "bow-wows."

FRIENDS

He does not know me, and he flings
At me the scorn which burns and stings;
Perhaps my name he greets with Jeers,
Questions my motives with his sneers,
But here and there I have a few Good friends who are forever true.

If I should fall they would be there
To comfort me in my despair;
To bind my wounds, and win me back
To strength to meet a fresh attack.
Whatever cruel storm descends,
It will not drive away my friends.

Strangers may flee and fawners hide,
Pharisees walk the other side,
The crows may mock and jibe and Jeer;
But from the few I still shall hear,
Though trampled in the dust I lie,
The words that they are standing by.

The men who walk in throngs depart
When the harsh storms of trouble start,
But friends who know—the loyal few
Who have gone down the road with you—
When life grows pitifully gray,
By storms are never blown away.

Fahney Estate Contested
FREDERICK—Brothers and sisters of the late Josiah H. Fahney are pitted against his widow, Mrs. Alice Kelly Fahney, of Chicago, in a fight over his $1,000,000 estate in that city, according to a dispatch received here. The fight started before Probate Judge Keats. Josiah Fahney was a son of Dr. Peter Fahney, a patent medicine manufacturer, who amassed great wealth, and established the Fahney Memorial Home for aged at San Mar, Washington county. Fahney died a year ago, leaving his widow the income of a $150,000 trust fund and distributing the rest of the estate among his brothers and sisters. The will confirmed an ante-nuptial agreement providing the fund and excluding Mrs. Fahney from her dower rights. Mrs. Fahney, represented by former Judge Charles S. Cutting asserts the later document annulled the first agreement.

Church Service Impressive
FREDERICK—Unusually impressive Christmas services were held Sunday in Calvary Methodist Episcopal church. At the Sunday School hour, the finest and most elaborate Christmas service in its history was conducted by the Leaders Bible Class. Among the musical features was the playing of Christmas carols on the saw and pitch fork, by Charles Hagan. A splendid address was also given by C. Thomas Summers and the attendance numbered 144. All departments of the school showed a combined attendance of 666. Every one present received a box of candy, the gift of the Sunday School Board. At 11 a. m., in addition to special music by the choir, the pastor, Dr. G. Ellis Williams, delivered a splendid sermon on "The Chimes of Phrophey." At 6:30 p. m., the Epworth League, led by Miss Ruth Zimmerman, conducted a candle light Christmas service which was very impressive.

Bury Drowned Infant
FREDERICK—The funeral of Charles Hewitt, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hewitt, of Thurmont, who was drowned Saturday afternoon when he fell into a small stream near his home, was held Monday. The child, who was aged one year, four months and 22 days, while playing about on Saturday afternoon, wandered away and it is supposed that he fell into a small stream near his home. The child was found by his mother. The funeral was held in the United Brethren church at Thurmont Monday at 1 o'clock and interment was made in the cemetery adjoining. Rev. J. I. Green conducted the services.

Hanoverian Reaches 100 Years
HANOVER—Hanover's oldest inhabitant is Daniel J. Barnitz, 209 Broadway, who was 100 years old on Christmas Day. He was born here on December 26, 1823. He is remarkably preserved for a man who has seen the passing of summers and winters for a full century. Four of his children are living: Miss Theresa Barnitz, aged 59; and Frank Barnitz, aged 66, formerly of Denver, Colorado.

radio, both of whom live with their father; William Barnitz, aged 62, of Johnston, and Sister Elizabeth, aged 66, of St. Joseph's Convent, Overbrook, Philadelphia. His wife, who was Maria Fisher, a daughter of the late Joseph and Mary Fisher, died on August 24, at the age of 92 years. On nice days Mr. Barnitz can be seen walking on the streets, going out unaccompanied. His eyesight is bad but he knows the town like a book and can find his way everywhere. He is very deaf. His chief diversion is smoking and he has been an inveterate smoker of a pipe all his life. His daughter, Miss Theresa, fills and lights his pipe and he smokes with evident relish.

Mother Wants Custody of Child
HANOVER—Mrs. Ruth Shoemaker, wife of George G. Shoemaker, of York, instituted habeas corpus proceedings in the court to recover possession of Eleanor Ruth Shoemaker, two years of age, daughter of the couple. The action is directed against Mr. Shoemaker. The petition in part sets forth that on the 24th of August, 1923, the petitioner, Mrs. Shoemaker, withdrew from the house and family of her husband, and that she has since filed her petition for a divorce, proceedings now pending in the court. The petition charges that on December 13, last, Mr. Shoemaker obtained custody of the child, by force, fraud, threats and intimidation, and that the child is now illegally restrained of her liberty by the father.

Motorist Loses Way In Fog
HANOVER—A seven-passenger sedan occupied by a New York family named Nakhin, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Nakhin and son, went over the bank on the Lincoln Highway near Cross Keys in the fog last Sunday evening. They were on their way to Hot Springs, Virginia. The car fell on its side and Mrs. Nakhin was slightly injured by broken glass. Dr. Sharp of New Oxford dressed her injuries. The damage to the machine consisting of bent fenders and broken windows was repaired by Charles Sheely in New Oxford. The party remained at Hotel Oxford till Monday morning when they continued their journey.

Imposter "Hooks" Lawyer
CHAMBERSBURG—James Penrose, of Philadelphia, alias James Biddle, self-styled relative of various judges of the state, was arrested Saturday night at Shippensburg, following activities here in which he fleeced two prominent men of small amounts of money through a hard luck story and on the strength of his family connections with the legal profession. Monday morning Penrose was arraigned before Squire Zinn at Shippensburg and held in $800 bail for Cumberland county court on the charge of false pretense in securing last Friday $11 from J. P. McKeehan, prominent Carlisle attorney and instructor at the Dickinson School of Law. Among the people who identified Penrose was Walter K. Sharpe, of town, who stated that Penrose was the same man who requested him to endorse a check here Saturday evening, giving the name of James Biddle. Percy Bard, pharmacist at Liggett's drug store, who cashed the check for "Biddle," also identified him. Patrolman Leisher, who accompanied Mr. Sharpe to Shippensburg, served a warrant charging false pretense on Penrose for his operations involving Mr. Sharpe. In default of bail Penrose was taken to the Cumberland county jail. His statements to local people that he was the owner of an eight-cylinder automobile proved to be false as local police could find no trace of an automobile of that description in garages of this vicinity.

Stolen Car Recovered
CHAMBERSBURG—A touring car, belonging to the Front Market Motor Supply Company, Harrisburg, was recovered here Sunday afternoon by local police after the alleged thieves had abandoned it on South Main street. Patrolman Holtry secured the number of a car, the driver of which broke traffic regulations by driving around the wrong side of Memorial Square Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. A few hours afterwards Samuel Myers and his brother, Charles, both of town, reported to the police that two strange men had been seen leaving an automobile parked on South Main street at the home of Miss Fannie Shatzley. Investigation by the police revealed that the car bore the same license tags as the one Holtry had seen in Memorial Square earlier in the afternoon and further inquiry disclosed that the car had been stolen at Harrisburg.

Woman Injured By Auto
CHAMBERSBURG—Miss Katharine Martin, an aged woman of Green-castle, was seriously hurt about 8 o'clock Saturday evening when she was knocked down by an automobile, driven by Mr. Crist, of Antrim, in front of her home in East Baltimore street, that place. Miss Martin attempted to cross the street and stepped from the front of an automobile, parked in front of her home, into the way of the coming automobile. Mr. Crist was driving slowly because of the wet street and when he tried to stop the car it skidded and hit Miss Martin. Her left leg and two ribs were broken and her left long punctured. She was taken to the Waynesboro Hospital.

Youth Held on Girl's Charge
HAGERSTOWN.—Being charged with taking Catharine McIntire, aged 18, graduate of last year's Waynesboro High School, to Frederick, for immoral purposes, Thomas Sister, of near Waynesboro, was arrested on a Mann charge and is being held in $1,000 bail. The girl is well known in Hagerstown. Sister, who is married, is charged with taking the girl to Frederick during the week of October 1. It is charged that they remained there over night and then returned, each to their respective homes. During her absence the girl's mother informed the police that she left town with a man, believed at that time to be another person, and a general search for the couple was made. Following their return Mrs. McIntire gave her information to Commissioner Rynebrake and had it presented to the federal department of justice, an operative from Philadelphia coming in town to investigate the affair. On December 4 the girl, a physician from town and Probation Officer Mrs. Mary S. G. Buch, of Chambersburg, went before the federal grand jury where they gave the testimony that resulted in a true bill being returned.

Farm Bureau to Meet
HAGERSTOWN.—Arrangements have been completed to care for between 500 and 600 delegates from all parts of Maryland who will go to Baltimore for the annual meeting of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation and affiliated associations, to be held at the Southern Hotel Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, January 9, 10 and 11, 1924. President E. P. Cahill of the federation will preside. Governor Ritchie, of Maryland; Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania; O. E. Bradfute, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, and other speakers of national prominence are on the program for addresses. On Wednesday afternoon, at the first business session, Mayor Jackson will welcome the delegates to the city and Edwin Warfield, Jr., vice president of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, will make the response.

Many Drivers Irresponsible
HAGERSTOWN.—Approximately one-third of the automobiles in Maryland are owned by persons irresponsible financially, according to J. LeRoy Hopkins, attorney for the Automobile Club of Maryland. At least half the drivers who figure in accidents, Mr. Hopkins said, are unable to pay for personal injury and damage to property inflicted by them. The bill for compulsory protection, prepared by Mr. Hopkins and Edgar Allan Poe and endorsed by the Automobile Club, provides a remedy for this condition. Mr. Hopkins said: "It is difficult to obtain the exact figures in connection with automobile accidents," said Mr. Hopkins. "From my own experience and from checking up on the experience of different lawyers who have a good deal of this kind of practice I find there is a shocking number of cases in which complainants are unable to get a penny for even serious injuries."

AGE IS SERVED IN XMAS CAGE GAME

Alumni Again Tounce High School Varsity; Score 26 to 16.

Age again was served when the Gettysburg High School alumni's quintet won the annual Christmas basketball tilt with the High School varsity in the College gymnasium on Monday evening. Last year, the Alumni five won the game only after two extra five-minute periods were played, and then by a single point.

This year, however, the Alumni came from behind a score of 12 to 9 against them at the end of the first half and tounded the 1923 varsity team 26 to 16. Although ten points separated the victor and the vanquished when the final whistle sounded, the contestants were more closely matched this year than last, and the game proved to be one of thrills and spills.

At the end of the first half, the hopes of the varsity five were high, but the sensational playing of Buehler, Armor and Bream for the alumni in the second period proved to be an obstacle which the varsity could not surmount. It was evident from the sidelines that the alumni needed the first period to get started and to put into operation some of the tricks learned in the cage game since leaving the High School.

For High School Moser, G. Bream and Tennant did the scoring, and most of that in the first half. All but one of High School's field goals were made in the first period. Foul shooting of the Maroon and White five was not up to standard, although in the first half the younger team showed its "big brothers" it was not to be fooled with.

A large crowd turned out to see the contest and a friendly spirit prevailed among the spectators, with the High School rooters in the majority. Enthusiasm ran high throughout the contest, some of the rooters becoming so excited at times that it seemed that some in the gallery would topple over the balustrade to the floor below.

WOMEN GIVE OUT

Housework is hard enough when healthy. Every Gettysburg woman who is having backache, blue and nervous spells, dizzy, headache and kidney or bladder trouble, should be glad to heed this Gettysburg woman's experience:

Miss Mary Dillman, 263 S. Washington St., says: "My back was very weak and hurt all the time. Backache bore down on me as if I had a great weight on my back. My kidneys were too frequent in action and when I heard of Doan's Pills, I purchased some at the People's Drug Store. This remedy gave me fine relief and has never since failed to benefit me when it was necessary to use them."

The above statement was given February 16, 1916 and on April 11, 1921, Miss Dillman said: "Nothing could ever make me go back on Doan's Pills. This fine kidney medicine drove all symptoms of kidney trouble from me. Every once in awhile I take a few Doan's to be sure my kidneys are still in good shape."

OLD TIMER IS BACK

"My friends had all given up and never expected to see me around again. I had given up hoping myself, as no medicine touched my case. The doctors had tried everything. My food did not digest and filled me with gas. My brother in Philadelphia wrote me to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. The first dose gave me wonderful relief and I am now as well as I ever was and feel thirty years younger." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convulse or money refunded, at People's Drug Store, and druggists everywhere—adv.

SCOTT'S SCHOOL PROGRAM

(Contributed) Last Friday afternoon the teacher, Mrs. Clem A. Hartman, and pupils of Scott's School gave a Christmas program which was well received. Invitations were sent to the patrons and many turned out. Many other persons were also present. Some special music was given by Robert Cullison and C. A. Hartman. Mr. Hartman also gave an address in which he emphasized the importance of cooperation of teacher and parents.

While the school was heartily singing "Santa Claus is Coming," this ancient gentleman himself appeared to the surprise of everybody. His coming was disastrous to the music but added greatly to the merriment. The manner in which he distributed the treat amused everyone present. A Spectator.

THE THIRTEENTH MONTH

YULETIDE IS THE YEAR'S THIRTEENTH MONTH

A Month of Just FIVE Amazing Store Days!

After Christmas there are just FIVE store days left for the Old Year of 1923 to shake off its shoes and clean up the desks for the New Year almost here. A whole month's work to do in FIVE DAYS! Little wonder that we forget all about costs and profits, to hurry away the goods that Christmas time should have sold and didn't. Now every present that wasn't given is almost LIKE A GIFT for the one who gets it at these little year-end prices. So Wednesday starts.

FIVE WONDERFUL DAYS FOR WISE SHOPPERS!

We Begin This "Month" with A Sale of Coats

Yuletide Greetings Come in the Form of Price Reductions

We are startling this thirteenth month sale with drastic price cuts on all our coats. The prices that follow will convince you at just what a saving you can buy now.

Sport and dress models, in plain, stripe and plaid are here for your choosing. The cloths are all the popular ones as polaire, chincilla, etc., and the workmanship is up to the high standard we set. Styling is a big factor in making coats and these are up to the minute. Do not miss this opportunity to invest in big money saving values.

Coats that were $13.50 to $15.00	now $8.75
Coats that were $18.50	now 9.75
Coats that were $21.00 and $21.50	now 13.50
Coats that were $25.00 and $27.50	now 14.75
Coats that Were $27.50 and $30.00	now 16.75
Coats that were $37.50 to $38.00	now $23.75
Coats that were $45.00	now $29.75

Other reductions just as startling.

WANTED!

300 SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

If I get this number of subscriptions for this excellent paper at $2.00 per year, I can secure a free trip to the World's Sunday School Convention to be held in Glasgow, Scotland, in June 1924.

The Christian Herald is a weekly paper full of helpful articles on Church and Sunday School work. The series by Marion Lawrence, "Building Up the Sunday School" which runs through the year is alone worth to any reader the cost of the year's subscription. The weekly discussion of the Sunday School Lesson by Dr. Samuel D. Price is another very popular feature.

Send in your subscriptions now, and help to have Adams County represented at this great world gathering of Sunday School workers.

The Way to a Man's Heart

Is the one's appearance only. Gone are the days when plain maid with delectable cooking could win charming man.

One's appearance is the sole weapon today. Beginning with shoes and then dressing accordingly.

That is why so many maidens buy their shoes at
